is one of the best of the tenor's roles. He took it up with all sincerity and at h's first appearance in the part made a deep impression. This has become deeper since Mr. Caruso, with repetitions, has elaborated the details of his singing and acting till he has made his impersonation rank as one of the most striking of the local operatic stase. It was quite up to its standard last evening.

Mme. Matzenauer's imposing Dallia was repeated to the evident pleasure of the audience. Mr. de Luca as the High Priest and Mr. Rothier as the old He-brew were other outstanding figures. The chorus has much to do in this opera and does it well. The orchestra is heard to advantage and the ballet is favorably displayed.
